►Division of English (New)

A new Division of English will be launched to offer students an opportunity to learn English as a universal language. Students will focus on the language, literature and culture of the English-speaking world in an interdisciplinary manner. They can also acquire the English skills required in practical fields such as English education, interpretation and translation. The goal is to develop women who possess and make use of intercultural competence supported by fluent English skills.

- Students can take classes in the three courses below in a cross-sectoral manner.
- A six-month Study Abroad to English-speaking countries is requisite in the second semester of the second year.

Department	Courses	Study Fields
English	English Studies Course: Students study the language, literature and culture of the English speaking world from a global perspective.	English Literature/Culture, English Linguistics
	TESOL Course: Students study English education with a global viewpoint.	English Education (including English Education for Children), Development of material
	Professional Development Course: Students prepare for careers using English.	Practical English, Interpretation, Translation, Journalistic English

►Department of Community Design (New)

The Division of Global Social Sciences has been promoting education in the social sciences field that emphasizes connecting to contemporary society. In addition to the present three departments, a new Department of Community Design will be established for students who want to contribute to building better communities.
